I just don't know if I can put alot of credibility in what he says. Not because it doesn't make sense, but because convicted felons don't make quality witnesses IMHO.

I agree, but especially in the case of the Kings/Lakers series, he is saying what many of us already believe. Now he may be saying that just because the idea that something fishy was going on was already out there, and he doesn't really know if there was orders to alter the games.

I will be interested to see how this plays out. I think it is especially interesting that the Feds are inquiring about Bavetta. They must have some kind of lead or info that leads them to him as being someone who could have been a factor.

One thing I do want to add is how hilarious it is to think that Stern had the officials give the Mavs an edge in that Rockets series because Cuban was complaining. If we have seen anything like that at all, it is that the Mavs seem to be on the losing end of those type situations because of Stern's disdain for Cuban.

Yes, I thought that he mentioned the lakers/Kings series because he knew there was so much suspicion about Game 6 already. He figured we'd want to believe him, thus giving him credibility.

The fact the feds were more interested in Bavetta than Donaghy in their gambling investigation is getting overlooked big time. There has got to be something there, or they wouldn't have gone that far with it.
