

---

ULL's second leading scorer out---

Posted by SUMG - 2010/02/25 15:32

---

Vito's blog states that ULL's second leading scorer is out. I believe his name is Gradnigo..or something like that.

They'll only have 8 players available. But that's all ASU had when they spanked us up in J'boro.

=====

Re:ULL's second leading scorer out---

Posted by SUMG - 2010/02/25 15:34

---

<http://meangreenblog.dentonrc.com/archives/2010/02/lookng-ahead-to-tonights-huge.html>

=====

Re:ULL's second leading scorer out---

Posted by CMJ - 2010/02/25 15:41

---

I think one of the guys from ULL broke the news a day or two ago, because I was pretty sure I'd heard it before I read Vito this morning. This could be an enormous break for our team. Sometimes teams can really come together for a game or two when one of their guys is out, so I'm not ready to say this gives us the game or anything. But things are looking good.

=====

Re:ULL's second leading scorer out---

Posted by CMJ - 2010/02/25 21:28

---

Well, that was a stressful game. At first we couldn't throw it in the ocean(or maybe it was their D) - and all I could think of was this was a terrible time to play like this with a nice crowd and all. But we got it together, and led most of the 2nd half. I never felt comfortable tho until about 2 minutes to go. Cajuns are definitely a quality team with nice athletes.

I felt like Tristan really saved the day with his play when we were scuffling. Then Josh and company brought us home.

=====