
The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by SUMG - 2010/04/29 13:17

It seems like all of our good (known) prospects have signed either with us or elsewhere. I don't think the others mentioned on Rivals or the kid on ESPN (Basil Brown).....I don't think we're really interested in any of them.

And it seems that all the good transfers have signed elsewhere.

Anybody I'm forgetting?

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by TheTastyGreek - 2010/04/29 13:35

I'd like to see us (if Carmouche isn't coming) reach out to the PG that SMU lost out on.

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by SUMG - 2010/04/29 13:59

TheTastyGreek wrote:

I'd like to see us (if Carmouche isn't coming) reach out to the PG that SMU lost out on.

I'm sorry....I totally blanked on Carmouche. I guess we do still have a good shot at him. BTW....I saw where another UNO transfer (Carl Blair?)...signed with Oklahoma.

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by TheTastyGreek - 2010/04/29 14:51

SUMG wrote:

TheTastyGreek wrote:

I'd like to see us (if Carmouche isn't coming) reach out to the PG that SMU lost out on.

I'm sorry....I totally blanked on Carmouche. I guess we do still have a good shot at him. BTW....I saw where another UNO transfer (Carl Blair?)...signed with Oklahoma.

Wow, good for him. I don't think he starts for them, but I definitely think he can play at that level.

Does Tyrna have any eligibility left? He's not really a stat sheet guy, but he can impact a game. I'm curious to see if he goes to an SBC school that needs inside help or if he just finishes up at UNO.

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by SUMG - 2010/04/29 15:04

TheTastyGreek wrote:

SUMG wrote:

TheTastyGreek wrote:

I'd like to see us (if Carmouche isn't coming) reach out to the PG that SMU lost out on.

I'm sorry....I totally blanked on Carmouche. I guess we do still have a good shot at him. BTW....I saw where another UNO transfer (Carl Blair?)...signed with Oklahoma.

Wow, good for him. I don't think he starts for them, but I definitely think he can play at that level.

Does Tyrna have any eligibility left? He's not really a stat sheet guy, but he can impact a game. I'm curious to see if he goes to an SBC school that needs inside help or if he just finishes up at UNO.

Here you go, John (a story about Blair to OU):

<http://blog.newsok.com/ou/2010/04/27/another-look-at-new-ou-point-guard-carl-blair/>

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/04/29 20:36

There is a unsigned senior showcase being held in Baton Rouge on May 22nd for any player that wants to come show their stuff. A lot of good kids still out there unsigned and turnout expected to be well into the hundredS.

JJ maybe waiting for this ?

Some big names still on the board :

- F Stephon Smith Woodrow Wilson
- C Tank Mayberry John Paul HS
- F Julian Washburn Duncanville
- F Alex Davis Yates
- PG Dre Evans Carter
- F Titus Rubles God's Academy

I could go on and on , but you get the picture.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/04/29 21:46

Vito reporting Carmouche heading to Memphis this weekend

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by Cooley - 2010/04/30 00:10

Don't know why Dre Evans is still on the board but he would be the best on your list 03. I think we would need a low post presence for him to be effective here at 5-9. Stephon Smith is not a mid-major prospect, in my opinion. Great body and extremely strong banger but does not have any offensive skills. Would look good on someone defensive line.

Mayberry is starting out at Navarro. Washburn would make since at the 3.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by CMJ - 2010/04/30 13:20

I'd rather get a post player, but Carmouche seems like a quality pickup to me.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by censored by laurie - 2010/04/30 14:02

What about Dominique Brooks from God's Academy? He has a dozen or so offers and looks like a solidly built guard at 6'2" 185. He may not have the best numbers, but he did play behind Ross-Miller.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/04/30 23:11

If we are talking transfers then maybe Cardell McFarland or why not another Arizona State forward , Taylor Rohde ??

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by TheTastyGreek - 2010/05/01 00:52

Here's an interesting possibility...

Paul McCoy (3 star Rivals, 3 star scout, Scout ranked #18 PG of 2008, ESPN ranked #32 PG and an 88 grade) is apparently transferring from SMU. SMU's Rivals page does indeed have a story about a big, shocking transfer. He put up 13.4 ppg, 4 rebounds, and 3 assists as a freshman, then tore an ACL last year.

We've gotten two valuable role players from SMU recently in Dez Willingham and Cam Spencer... Would another reformed Mustang consider coming north to us?

With a redshirt year to fully rehab his ACL, he'd be a nice 2 year option at point guard.

I think I'd rather have him than Carmouche, though it would be nice to have the immediate contribution that Carmouche would provide.

He's not local, so there's not really any reason for him to stay in the Metroplex... But if he's really transferring, I hope we make a run at him.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/05/01 07:54

Speaking of SMU , I wonder where Cort Hoge & Alex Malone wound up ? I believe we offered both out of high school

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by CMJ - 2010/05/01 09:38

The ASU connection is an interesting one NT03. We've gotten a couple kids out of there in the past 6 or so years. And didn't McCoy go to community college out there? One of the assistants must know some folks in AZ.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/05/05 13:28

CarMouche to Memphis

I really doubt we land a transfer now , so a few names out there that could be a possibility

These kids were at the 1-10 Elite camp in which JJ was there. This is where he probably sealed the deal w/ McGhee

Nick Walker
Jarvis Ray >> TCU

D'Audrio Patton (* If I had to pick one , he would be it)
Matt Moss
Eldrige Moore
Kyle McClue
Aaron Jones
Mike Harrell
Langston Galloway >> rivals has him as a verbal to St Joe's
Javon Felix >> rivals has him as a verbal to Duke
Matt Dorenbecker
CHris Crawford >> Memphis
Chip Armelin
Shavon Coleman > I want to say he verballed to ULM , but not sure if he signed a LOI. Avg
29pts,9rbs,5 asst in HS

Patton is ranked #100 by usahoops.com , Snap Peters is ranked #113

I'm coming up with some sites saying verbal and others saying signing w/ Coleman. If he hasn't signed yet that would be a huge steal if we could land him

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by CMJ - 2010/05/05 13:38

Pick'ns looking slim right now. Of course we've grabbed some real steals late before, so I trust we'll get someone who can play ball. Patton would be pretty amazing.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/05/05 13:47

If it's someone like Washburn it would be worth the wait. I don't what his hold up is or if we even offered but maybe the kids wants to stay close to home.

Cooley , you got any inside info on where Washburn might land ?

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by TheTastyGreek - 2010/05/07 14:28

Arnett Moultrie, if he doesn't get drafted?

I don't mean to keep throwing out every single transfer prospect that pops up, but it's a quiet time and I still can't bear to resign myself to looking... ahead to football season

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by Cooley - 2010/05/08 02:37

Looks like grades maybe a concern for the rest of the best of Texas' unsigned. Washburn, according to Rivals, has some high major interest. Like many, he may oversign if he does not go juco or prep. Stability is starting to be my concern with this and family. Played well as a freshman at Kimball, transferred to Duncanville, left for prep in NJ and back to Duncanville for the last 5 or so games his senior year.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by GrandGreen - 2010/05/14 15:23

Is not May 15 the last day for spring signings? If NT does sign someone, my bet is that it will be someone out of the blue. I thought Carmuche would have been a very good signing as it would have elevated next year's team. It is kind of amusing considering all the talk of getting rid of current players to make way for this or that transfer, that NT could apparently still be looking to fill its last known ship.

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by SUMG - 2010/05/14 20:07

GrandGreen wrote:

Is not May 15 the last day for spring signings? If NT does sign someone, my bet is that it will be someone out of the blue. I thought Carmuche would have been a very good signing as it would have elevated next year's team. It is kind of amusing considering all the talk of getting rid of current players to make way for this or that transfer, that NT could apparently still be looking to fill its last known ship.

I think the signing period is over soon. Not sure the exact date. I was thinking it's the 12th or 19th...because I believe it always starts on a Wednesday and ends on a Wednesday.

As I recall....we did sign Kedrick Hogans in the middle of summer--July maybe? So there may be a signing period in the summer?

=====

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by Cooley - 2010/05/14 20:46

Alzie went very late last year as well!

Petteway, once a surprise, now a star!

May 13, 2010

Damon Sayles
TexasHoops.com Senior Writer

About this time last year, Terran Petteway, long dreads and all, was something of an AAU ninja. It wasn't uncommon for him to sneak up on the rest of the competition and slice and dice his way through opponents left and right.

Nobody is sleeping on the 6-foot-6, 195-pound junior this year. Petteway had a stellar season at Ball High School in Galveston, and he's leading a Galveston Hornets AAU team that is coming off a championship performance at the Slo-Motion Classic two weekends ago in Houston. Petteway had 32 points and 10 rebounds in a 77-72 championship-game win against the Houston Hoopstars. "It's way different for me now," Petteway said. "Last year, people didn't really know who I was. Now when I walk into a gym, they know who I am, so they have a game plan. It feels good, but it also makes me work harder."

Preparing for bigger and better competition is nothing new to Petteway. He's been groomed well by his father, Hornets coach Terry Petteway, as well as his two older brothers, Terrell and Tavoir. Terrell played professionally in England. Both brothers never gave Terran anything easy.

It's Terran's work ethic, however, that makes him such an intriguing college prospect. Petteway has put on roughly 10 pounds since last summer, and if he's not in the weight room, he's in the gym working on his perimeter game, as well as his interior game. Petteway most likely will be a shooting guard or small forward in college, but he's capable of playing up to four positions in high school. "His work ethic is what really takes him far. He loves the game," Terry Petteway said. "He's always been a gym rat, but because of his work ethic, his game is continuing to elevate. He never stops working because he doesn't want anyone passing him by." Terry Petteway added: "He's basically been pretty consistent. What he did is what he did all of last year and what he did this year at his school. He can shoot, he can rebound, he can push it and he can find the open man. He creates double teams and triple teams. He's a threat."

Terry Petteway said Terran has attracted more than 50 colleges. UTEP, Tulane, Colorado, North Texas and South Alabama are among the schools that have already offered. Terran is receiving interest from Baylor, Texas, Auburn, Texas Tech, Marquette, Providence, Penn State and Georgia, among others. Petteway led Ball in scoring this past season, averaging 19.1 points per game and helping the Tors compile a 21-6 record and a trip to the UIL Class 5A playoffs. He was the District 24-5A Offensive Player of the Year playing with Ball.

When Petteway puts on a Hornets jersey, he teams up with standouts such as Ball's Mike Evans and La Marque High School's Sam Kinlaw, the MVP and Defensive Player of the Year, respectively, of District 24-5A (Kinlaw was at Dickinson High School last season). The Hornets will go for back-to-back AAU titles this weekend at the Summer Prep Showcase in Katy. The Hornets will play D-Gib Hoops-Clayton in their first pool-play game at 8 a.m. Saturday. Be assured, Petteway won't enter the gym as a virtual unknown.

"Most of the college coaches already feel he's a Division I player," Terry Petteway said of Terran. "A lot of folks are really and truly in love with his game. As the summer goes on, a lot more schools are going to feel that way, as they have an opportunity to see him." Terran added: "I'm just trying to be the guy who's going to work hard. I know there are going to be someone out there who's going to want to D me up and lock me down. I have to make sure that doesn't happen."

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by NT03 - 2010/05/16 21:21

It's May 19th.

Your right we signed Hogans late , August 17th (according to drc).

I guess there is a break after the 19th and then a late period starts up again later in the summer ?

Re:The last scholarship---thoughts?

Posted by CMJ - 2010/05/17 19:12

I really thought those were the only 2 signing periods. There is a early signing period in November, but I can't recall a summer one.