

---

Re: Mean Green top Hilltoppers

Posted by Evan - 2007/02/04 11:25

---

Nice illustration of the atmosphere.

The WKU comeback does not surprise me at all, as JJ can't seem to coach with a lead. But it's very good that the guys held on and won against the team that has been the class of the league as long as I've been a Mean Green fan. It still scares me that they gave up such a large lead, but I have to give WKU some credit for that at least, because it has become clear over the years that they are a well coached and disciplined team and never feel they are out of a game and that they will win any game, especially against Sun Belt competition.

Maybe this win is the turning point for the team and JJ as a coach. I still can't put much confidence in it until I see JJ do something of significance when it matters, but I am definitely rooting for it to happen.

=====

Re: Mean Green top Hilltoppers

Posted by scrappy - 2007/02/04 11:43

---

My hope is that this was a learning night for JJ, seeing that even with one of your big men out, you have to stay with the same gameplan that go you there. If we did, what is the worst that could happen.....we go 8 minutes without a field goal. Well that is exactly what just passing around the perimeter got us. When we did drive, we got the call, but couldn't convert at the stripe.

I hope JJ sees that he can prevent this kind of thing and adjusts accordingly.

=====